to were called a shop-keeping nation by Napoleon but it is his own Frenchmen and French wo have the true secret of shop-keeping. They make shops faceinating. They have made shop keeping a fine art. The other day, the "Easy Chair" stepped into a shop in Maiden lane, prepared to spend a pretty seam of miney—fit a very proper purpose. But it is an of miney—fit a very proper purpose. But it is had invaried the shop keeper's house, which is his castle, it would not have been more coully received. The Medicality of Maidenage with which is considered. The disdainful indifference with which its question was answered was exquisitely comical; and the slop-keeper proceeded to link for what was required with a superb carelessness, and an air of other weariness and disgust of this incessant doing of favors to the most undeserving and inequificant of geople. It was plainly an act of pure grace that the "Easy Chair" was not instantly shot into the street as rubbish, or was not instantly shot hole the street as rubbish, or given in charge to the police as a common vagabond. This worthy attendant—doubtless very estimable in his private capacity—is a serious injury to the busi-ness which he is supposed to belo. He does not in the least application his profession. Let an "Easy Chair" advise him to run on the sea to Paris, and observe how they keep shop in that capital. Dues he want a cravail Here is an bourn heating dressed, withouth her witne for his capacity dressed, evidently long waiting for him especially, and long-ing to serve him. Is it a cravat that Monstern whates? Charming! The most ravishing styles are just ready! Is it blue, or this, or that that Monstern prefers? Municur's taste is perfect. Look! It is a mirrole of beauty that he selects. Will be permit?"
And before you know it, you foolish fellow, who don't understand the first principle of your railing—before ou know it, she has thrown it around your you know it, she has thrown it around your need, she has fied it defty under your chin, and that pretty face is looking into yours, and that pleasant voice is saying. "Nothing could be better. It is the most smiling effect possible." You might as well hope to escape the sirees as to go from under those hands without haying that cravat. This is shop-keeping and a little study of the art as thus practiced would be of the attmast service to the "Race Charle" from in Makket lane. The shope there are poetry, and e-pecially during the holidays they are glittering, but they are a little cold and formal. The air of the neck, as it were, entangling him hopelessly in spikes and satin webs, the "Easy Chair" does not know But it can believe it as it passes by upon the outside and beholds the windows which Paris could have surpass. Through those windows it sees that, as sminded that in Peris the somet are among the accomplished accountants also; and it remembers the in the same city men are cooks. It is very sure the when Madame Wells, who was afterwards the Ma when another echineses De Lavalette, became, at the death of her husband, the head of the great banking-house, her cook was a man.
